SUMMARY ANALYSIS

CS/CS/CS/HB 993 & HB 7239 was passed by the House on May 5, 2011. The bill revises portions of Chapter 120, the Administrative Procedures Act (APA).

Rulemaking Process: The bill amends agency rulemaking procedures under the APA.

- Requires agencies to include in each notice of rulemaking whether the proposed rule requires legislative ratification.
- Conforms certain rulemaking timeframes to other periods required in the statutory rulemaking process by restoring certain time deadlines as provided before the 2010 amendments.

Legislative Ratification: The bill revises various provisions of the APA to align with the legislative ratification requirements enacted in HB 1565, passed in 2010.

- Provides a procedure for agencies to withdraw rules prior to becoming effective if the rule is invalidated by a final order or is timely submitted to the Legislature but not ratified in the regular session.
- Provides for withdrawal of rules that are not effective because they are not ratified by the Legislature.
- Expressly includes legislative ratification in the description of factors controlling when an adopted rule takes effect.

Exemptions to Economic Analysis and Ratification Requirements: The bill clarifies and revises portions of the APA to exempt specific types of rulemaking from the requirements for economic analysis or ratification.

- Exempts emergency rulemaking, rules adopting federal standards, rules adjusting certain tolls, and rules implementing the 2011 Student Success Act from the requirements to prepare a statement of estimated regulatory costs and submission for legislative ratification.
- Excludes from the ratification requirement the amendments and triennial updates of both the Florida Building Code and the Florida Fire Prevention Code.

Burden of Ultimate Persuasion in Administrative Licensing Proceedings under Chs. 373, 378, 403: The bill amends the APA to clarify the burden of proof for non-applicant petitioners in administrative proceedings opposing the issuance of a license, permit, or conceptual approval under Ch. 373, 378, or 403, F.S. The bill clarifies such interveners have the burden of ultimate persuasion, meaning they are required to prove the agency should not grant the application based on their objection(s).

Review of Existing Rules with Significant Economic Effect: The bill creates a one-time process in the APA requiring all agencies to undertake a comprehensive review of the economic impact of their respective rules effective on or before November 16, 2010. This follows the pattern for the review of statutory authority conducted after the 1996 substantive amendments to the APA. Additionally, the bill requires each agency to identify all revenue rules and all rules under which the agency requires data reporting from external sources. The report will include the statutes authorizing the data collection, how the data is used by the agency, and the policies advanced by the program.

The bill creates s. 120.74(3), requiring agencies annually to report to the Legislature their intended rulemaking for the next fiscal year, excluding emergency rulemaking, and s. 120.74(4), modifying existing reporting requirements during the comprehensive review period.

New s. 120.745 creates the comprehensive review and reporting for older rules, including preparation of economic analyses to identify all rules that meet the same criteria that, for rules proposed after 11/16/2010, would require legislative ratification.

The comprehensive review will continue through the 2014 regular session of the Legislature to provide sufficient time for the agencies to conduct the review and for public participation, legislative consideration of the reports, and any action the Legislature chooses to take. The bill provides that the section creating the one time review is automatically repealed as of July 1, 2014.

The bill also creates s. 120.7455, stating the Legislature may conduct an internet-based public survey about the impact of rules, laws, ordinance, and regulations on the ability of Floridians to engage in lawful conduct. This new section also provides use immunity from prosecution or enforcement actions for participating in the survey as well as protection from retaliatory agency enforcement actions arising out of a person's providing information to the Legislature.

The bill has an indeterminate, but insignificant, fiscal impact.

The bill is effective upon becoming a law.

I. SUBSTANTIVE ANALYSIS

A. EFFECT OF CHANGES:

1. Background

HB 1565 was passed during the 2010 regular session but was vetoed by the Governor. On November 16, 2010, the Legislature, in special session, voted to override that veto and the bill became law as Chapter 2010-279, Laws of Florida. The law created s. 120.541(3), F.S., requiring submission of rules with certain economic impacts for ratification by the Legislature before taking effect.

The law also lengthened the time (from 21 days to 45 days) before an agency could adopt a rule after revising a required economic analysis and lengthened the time (from 20 days to 44 days) for a person to challenge the validity of a rule after the agency prepared the required economic analysis.¹ These changes created a potential timing conflict with existing provisions which allowed only 21 days to bring a challenge before the agency could file for final rule adoption if the economic analysis was not revised.

Under current law, an agency begins the formal rulemaking process by filing a notice of the proposed rule.² The notice is published by the Department of State in the Florida Administrative Weekly³ and must provide certain information, including the text of the proposed rule, a summary of the agency's statement of estimated regulatory costs (SERC), if one is prepared, and procedures for a party to request a public hearing on the proposed rule.

Present law distinguishes between a rule being "adopted" and becoming enforceable or "effective."⁴ Prior to the 2010 revision, the law provided only two conditions⁵ before a rule takes effect; after the revision, legislative ratification became the third.⁶ A rule filed for adoption may be modified or withdrawn before taking effect only in response to an objection from the Joint Administrative Procedures Committee of the Legislature (JAPC) or to extend the effective date for up to 60 days while the agency considers a JAPC objection.⁷ Once a rule goes into effect an agency may repeal the rule only through the usual procedures for rulemaking.⁸

An agency may repeal an effective rule only through the usual procedures for rule making.⁸ Newly-elected statewide executive officials are required to follow this process even if a careful initial review of programs within their respective jurisdictions discloses a number of rules which are obsolete or inconsistent with the policies of the elected official.

Rules must be filed for adoption no earlier than 28 days and not later than 90 days after the agency publishes the notice of proposed rule; however, the later deadline may change depending on different factors.⁹ To ensure completion of the rulemaking process, Chapter 120, F.S., the Administrative

¹ Chapter 2010-279, Laws Of Florida, created s. 120.541(1)(d), providing 45 days for an agency to make available a revised statement of estimated regulatory costs ("SERC"), and amended s. 120.56(2)(a), F.S., to provide 44 days from delivery of the revised SERC for a party to file a petition challenging the proposed rule.

³ Section 120.55(1)(b)2., F.S.

⁴ Section 120.54(3)(e)6., F.S. Before a rule becomes enforceable, thus "effective," the agency first must complete the rulemaking process and file the rule for adoption with the Department of State.

Procedure Act (APA), provides different times in which a party may challenge a proposed rule.¹⁰ If an agency is required to prepare a SERC the rule cannot be filed for adoption until 21 days after the SERC is provided to parties and made publicly available.¹¹ The 2010 revision did not alter this requirement but created new paragraph s. 120.541(1)(d), F.S., delaying adoption of a rule for 45 days after the agency makes a revised SERC available and, in such cases, providing 44 days for a party to challenge a proposed rule.¹² These revised times conflict with the various 21 day timeframes provided for different aspects of rulemaking, such as requesting a hearing and submitting materials responding to the rulemaking notice,¹³ filing notices of substantial changes due to an objection from JAPC,¹⁴ or filing a rule for adoption if no objections are received in 21 days.¹⁵

2. Statutory Changes

a. Rulemaking Process

The bill makes technical revisions to the rulemaking process in the APA to resolve issues arising from the passage of Ch. 2010-279, Laws of Florida.

(1) The bill requires an agency's notice of proposed rulemaking under s. 120.54(3)(a)1., F.S., to include a statement as to whether, based on the statement of the estimated regulatory costs, the proposed rule is expected to require legislative ratification before the rule takes effect.

(2) The bill resolves the timing conflicts created in the 2010 law by reversing the changes as follows:

- Instead of allowing 45 days, the bill requires submission of a revised SERC at least 21 days before the rule is filed for adoption; thus, conforming the time with that for adopting a rule after providing an original SERC.
- The bill reverts to 20 days the time for challenging a proposed rule after the agency provides a SERC or a revised SERC; thus, requiring the challenge to be brought during the usual waiting period of 28 days before the rule may be filed for adoption.

b. Legislative Ratification

(1) The requirement for legislative ratification adopted in 2010 created potential conflicts within the existing rulemaking procedures of the APA. Because of a statutory delay between filing a rule for adoption and the time a rule takes effect, current law allows an agency to withdraw the rule from further consideration only if the JAPC objects to the rule.¹⁶ A rule in effect cannot be withdrawn but only repealed through the standard rulemaking process.¹⁷

The new requirement for legislative ratification creates the possibility that an agency may adopt a rule that is never ratified, leaving an agency with no authority to withdraw or repeal the ineffective rule. Additionally, if a challenge to the rule brought subsequent to adoption results in a final order in which the agency would prefer to correct the rule, the agency could take no action.

A rule projected to have a specific economic impact exceeding $1 million in the aggregate over 5 years¹⁸ must be ratified by the Legislature before taking effect.¹⁹ A rule must be filed for adoption before it may take effect²⁰ and cannot be filed for adoption until completion of the rulemaking process.²¹ As a rule submitted under s. 120.541(3), F.S., becomes effective if ratified by the Legislature, a rule must be filed for adoption before being submitted for legislative ratification.

Another issue occurs when a rule takes effect without being submitted for legislative ratification but is later found by final adjudication or administrative order to be invalid because its actual economic effect showed that ratification was required. Because the rule met the statutory criteria mandating submission, but was never ratified, it never went into effect and the agency could not rely on it. In essence, an agency has an adopted rule that cannot be modified or possibly repealed.

The bill resolves these issues by authorizing:

- Withdrawal or modification of the rule in response to an objection by JAPC;
- Withdrawal or modification of the rule in response to a final order, not subject to further appeal, entered in a rule challenge brought after adoption but before the rule takes effect;
- Withdrawal, but not modification, if the rule requires ratification and more than 90 days have passed since the rule was filed for adoption without the Legislature ratifying the rule; and
- JAPC notifies the agency that an objection to the rule is being considered, in which case the rule may be modified to extend the effective date by not more than 60 days.

(2) The bill expressly includes legislative ratification in the statutory description of those contingencies affecting when a rule becomes effective.

c. Exemptions

(1) To SERC and Ratification Requirements

Since the passage of HB 1565 the Legislature received requests for certain types of rulemaking to be exempted from legislative ratification. The bill exempts the adoption of emergency rules, rules adopting federal standards, the adjustment of certain tolls, and rulemaking required under Ch. 2011-01, the Student Success Act, from the requirements for preparation of a SERC and legislative ratification.

(a) Emergency Rules

Agencies are authorized to respond to immediate dangers to the public health, safety, or welfare, by adopting emergency rules.²² Emergency rules are not adopted with the formalities required for usual rulemaking²³ but the action must be necessary to protect the public.²⁴ Prompt publication is required and prompt judicial review is available to test the agency's findings and basis for the emergency rule.²⁵ Emergency rules typically are effective immediately²⁶ upon filing but are of limited duration (up to 90 days), encouraging an agency to begin regular rulemaking to adopt a permanent rule on the same subject.²⁷ Emergency rules may not be renewed unless regular rulemaking is initiated to adopt a permanent rule and a challenge is pending to the proposed rule or the proposed rule is pending legislative ratification.²⁸

Prior to enactment of Chapter 2010-279, L.O.F., the regular rulemaking procedure expressly excluded the adoption of emergency rules from the requirement to prepare a SERC.²⁹ The 2010 act created an internal inconsistency by excluding SERCs prepared for emergency rules from the comprehensive economic analysis³⁰ required for regular rulemaking, implying SERCs would be required for emergency rules.³¹ Presently, one section of the APA now states emergency rulemaking does not require preparation of a SERC³² while another section implies a modified SERC is required.³³

The public policy behind emergency rulemaking differs from the concerns supporting preparation of SERCs and mandating legislative ratification. Keys to both of these requirements are time and deliberation of action, neither of which is available in a true emergency as recognized in the statute authorizing emergency rulemaking.³⁴ Because of the prior exclusion of emergency rulemaking from the SERC requirement, and because a permanent rule proposed to replace a similar emergency rule is subject to the full SERC and ratification requirements, the language adopted in 2010 should be conformed with the existing sections to eliminate this inconsistency.

(b) Rules Adopting Federal Standards

Agencies authorized to implement, operate, or enforce federal programs frequently adopt rules substantially similar to the federal regulations created for such programs under federal law. The APA provides a separate, streamlined procedure for adopting such federal regulations in s. 120.54(6), F.S. This process permits an agency to implement the federal regulations and respond more promptly to changes in the federal law. An objection filed by a substantially affected person will require the agency to follow the standard rulemaking procedure under s. 120.54(3), F.S., unless the rule is not materially different from the federal regulation.³⁵

The current language of s. 120.541(1)(b), F.S., requires the preparation of a SERC for any proposed rule which adversely affects small businesses or will increase regulatory costs by more than $200,000 in the aggregate during the first year the rule is effective. No distinction is made for emergency rules or rules adopting federal standards. The current language of s. 120.541(4), F.S., exempts both emergency rulemaking and adoption of rules incorporating federal standards only from the comprehensive economic analysis required for a SERC. The reference in the statute to “paragraph (2)(a)” appears to be inadvertent, creating both an inconsistency in the language and an inference these types of rulemaking will comply with the SERC requirement in s. 120.54(3)(b), F.S.

(c) Adjustment of Tolls

Section 338.155(1), F.S., authorizes the Department of Transportation (DOT) to adopt rules relating to the payment, collection, and enforcement of tolls. Section 338.165(3), F.S., requires DOT, including the turnpike enterprise, to index toll rates on existing toll facilities “to the annual Consumer Price Index or similar inflation indicators.” Toll rate adjustments for inflation may be made no more frequently than once a year and must be made no less frequently than once every 5 years. The bill exempts the indexing of toll rates from the statutory requirements for preparing SERCs and for legislative ratification. The adjustment of toll rates would remain subject to the procedure and scrutiny in the rulemaking process but the concern for additional legislative scrutiny imposed by ratification appears to be met by the standards imposed under the substantive statutes implemented by DOT rule.

(d) Rulemaking Under the Student Success Act

Chapter 2011-01, Laws of Florida, the Student Success Act, significantly changed methods of evaluation and accountability in public education, including the compensation and retention of teachers. The act authorized rulemaking under several statute sections, including s. 1012.22, s. 1012.27, s.

As the act addresses a number of timelines required under the federal “Race to the Top” education program, and the required rulemaking must accord with the procedures required under the APA, exempting rulemaking under these sections from the SERC and ratification requirements will enable timely implementation of the Act’s requirements.

(e) Creation of Exemptions to SERC and Ratification Requirements

- (I) Section 120.541(4), F.S., is amended to exempt the following from the requirements for preparation of a SERC and legislative ratification:
 - Adoption of emergency rules
 - Adoption of rules adopting federal standards.
- (II) Section 120.80(18), F.S., is created to exempt the adjustment of certain tolls by DOT from the requirements for preparation of a SERC and legislative ratification.
- (III) Section 120.81(1), F.S., is amended by adding paragraph (I) to exempt rulemaking required under Ch. 2011-01, Laws of Florida, the Student Success Act, from the requirements for preparation of a SERC and legislative ratification.

(2) Exemption Only to Required Legislative Ratification

Current law requires legislative ratification of all rules exceeding the statutory economic impact threshold. Mandatory updates to the Florida Building Code and the Florida Fire Prevention Code are required to be adopted every 3 years³⁶ and are developed with significant involvement of the Legislature and its substantive committees, business and industry representatives, local and state government, and the general public. In conjunction with these triennial updates, both codes are continually reviewed and revised by their respective authorities.³⁷ Other rules involve state adoption of federal standards for operation of programs involving significant federal oversight due to funding sources or implementation of federal law and are adopted under a procedure separate from regular rulemaking.³⁸ These types of rules are subject to economic scrutiny in the rulemaking process; but, the concern for additional legislative scrutiny imposed by ratification appears to be met by the standards imposed under the substantive statutes being implemented by rule.

(a) The Florida Building Code

The Florida Building Code (Building Code) is the unified building code applicable statewide as authorized by statute.³⁹ The overall purpose for the Building Code is to create within a single set of documents uniform standards applicable to all aspects of construction in Florida to provide effective and reasonable protection for public health, safety, and welfare “...at the most reasonable cost to the consumer.”⁴⁰ The Florida Building Commission (“Commission”)⁴¹ is responsible for adopting, updating, and general administration of the Building Code. With certain exceptions, enforcement of the Building Code is through duly-authorized state and local agencies.⁴²

The law provides detailed sections on legislative intent⁴³, Building Code adoption and contents,⁴⁴ specific processes for different types of amendments,⁴⁵ the triennial comprehensive update conducted by the Commission,⁴⁶ and the Commission's powers.⁴⁷ The express intent of the law is for the Commission to use the statutory rulemaking requirements and process⁴⁸ for adopting, amending, or updating the Building Code.⁴⁹

(3) It is the intent of the Legislature that the Florida Building Code be adopted, modified, updated, interpreted, and maintained by the Florida Building Commission in accordance with ss. 120.536(1) and 120.54 and enforced by authorized state and local government enforcement agencies.

This intent is made a specific requirement in the substantive sections on adoption,⁵⁰ amendments,⁵¹ and updates.⁵² In addition, a large number of substantive bills and amendments are considered by the Legislature each year, keeping the Legislature actively engaged in the process of continual revision.

The Commission is required to update the Building Code every 3 years, using the APA rulemaking process. The statute also provides a minimum time of 6 months between adoption of the updated Building Code and its effective date.⁵³ Because the Commission is housed in the Department of Community Affairs (DCA) solely for administrative purposes, DCA publishes the notices required for rulemaking⁵⁴ as part of its duties to provide the Commission with administrative and staff support.⁵⁵

The statute imposes detailed requirements the Commission must follow to adopt, amend, review, and update the Building Code in addition to following APA procedural requirements.⁵⁶ The resulting Building Code contains or incorporates the laws and rules pertaining to all major aspects of public and private building construction in Florida, from broad areas including design, physical construction, modification, repair, and even demolition,⁵⁷ to specific matters from structural and mechanical systems to elevators and coastal construction standards.⁵⁸ The Building Code must reference without change the Florida Fire Prevention and Life Safety Codes adopted by Department of Financial Services rule.⁵⁹ When updating the Building Code, the Commission is required to create the Building Code's foundation by incorporating the most current versions of a number of standard codes, such as the International Plumbing Code and the National Electrical Code.⁶⁰ The entire process of updating the Building Code is subject to extensive statutory direction,⁶¹ continual legislative revision, and the procedural protections of the APA rulemaking process.⁶²

(b) The Florida Fire Prevention Code

One of the key components of the Florida Building Code cross-references to the separately-adopted Florida Fire Prevention Code (Fire Code). The State Fire Marshall is required to adopt a new edition of the Fire Code every 3 years through the rulemaking provisions of the APA.⁶³ The triennial update of the Fire Code is coordinated with that of the Building Code in order to prevent undue burdens on businesses and consumers.⁶⁴ As part of the triennial update, the State Fire Marshall notifies each municipal, county, and special district fire department of the pending review and update. The local officials are required to provide copies of their local fire code amendments no later than 120 days before the date the State Fire Marshall is to adopt the triennial updates, in order for the Fire Marshall to determine whether the local provisions comply with the law.⁶⁵ Under present law, local fire code amendments are effective only until the adoption of the next triennial review.⁶⁶

(c) Impact of Potential Legislative Ratification on Building and Fire Codes

DCA estimates compliance by businesses and consumers simply with the local construction permitting requirements resulting from the existence and enforcement of the Building Code readily exceed an aggregate of $1 million over 5 years.⁶⁷ As the Building Code is adopted in compliance with legislative intent and protects public health, safety, and welfare at the least cost to the consumer,⁶⁸ the resulting direct or indirect regulatory costs are likely to exceed the statutory threshold requiring ratification.

The Commission currently is completing the third triennial update to the Code and has begun the rulemaking process.⁶⁹ DCA anticipates the rule incorporating the final version of the updated Code will be ready to file for adoption after May 6 but before June 30, 2011.⁷⁰ Absent the requirement of legislative ratification, the Code would become effective no later than December 31, 2011.⁷¹ However, since the regulatory costs resulting from the operation of the Code will exceed the level of economic impact requiring legislative ratification, and the Code will not be adopted through rulemaking prior to the end of the regular session of the Legislature, under present law the earliest the Code may be considered for ratification would be during the 2012 regular session.

The State Fire Marshall concurrently is preparing the triennial update of the Fire Code for adoption at the same time as the Building Code update.⁷²

(d) Creation of Exemptions Only From Ratification

The bill exempts rulemaking amendments and triennial updates to the Florida Building Code and Florida Fire Prevention Code from the requirement of legislative ratification. Rulemaking for these provisions will remain subject to the preparation of a comprehensive SERC and economic analysis in addition to the other procedural requirements of the APA.

- (I) Section 120.80(16), F.S., is amended by adding paragraph (d) to exempt amendments and triennial updates of the Florida Building Code only from the requirement for legislative ratification.
- (II) Section 120.80(17), F.S., is created to exempt amendments and triennial updates of the Florida Fire Protection Code only from the requirement for legislative ratification.

d. Burden of Ultimate Persuasion in Licensing Proceedings under Chs. 373, 378, 403

Section 120.569(2), F.S., is amended by adding paragraph (p) to revise the order of presentation and clarify the burden of ultimate persuasion in administrative proceedings affecting a party's substantial interests under the following chapters:

- Chapter 403, F.S., pertaining to permit applications for activities affecting the general environmental protection statutes.

A party other than the applicant for a permit, license, or conceptual approval from the applicable agency may petition for an administrative hearing as a third party to challenge the agency's pending grant of the requested action. Under current law the applicant bears the ultimate burden to prove its entitlement to the requested license, permit, or conceptual approval.

The bill clarifies the burden of ultimate persuasion in proceedings by a non-applicant challenging a requested license, permit, or approval under the above 3 chapters. The petitioner initiating the action has the burden of ultimate persuasion and, in the first instance, has the burden of going forward with the evidence.

e. Rulemaking and Economic Review

(1) Background

(a) Rulemaking Authority

The APA establishes the process for administrative rulemaking. With the enactment of HB 1565 in November, 2010,⁷³ the Legislature amended the APA to control more closely the adoption of rules with significant economic impacts.

A rule is an agency statement of general applicability which interprets, implements, or prescribes law or policy, including the procedure and practice requirements of an agency as well as certain types of forms.⁷⁴ Rulemaking authority is delegated by the Legislature⁷⁵ through statute and authorizes an agency to "adopt, develop, establish, or otherwise create"⁷⁶ a rule. Agencies do not have discretion whether to engage in rulemaking.⁷⁷ To adopt a rule an agency must have a general grant of authority to implement a specific law by rulemaking.⁷⁸ The grant of rulemaking authority itself need not be detailed.⁷⁹ The specific statute being interpreted or implemented through rulemaking must provide specific standards and guidelines to preclude the administrative agency from exercising unbridled discretion in creating policy or applying the law.⁸⁰

The rulemaking requirements of the APA apply to "agencies," defined by s. 120.52(1), F.S. Agencies include executive branch entities acting pursuant to powers other than those derived from the constitution. In addition to the Governor and Cabinet officers, the APA applies to a wide variety of entities with statewide or regional authority, such as all departments and entities specified in s. 20.04,

The development of the APA parallels the Legislature's refinement of the strictures regulating the exercise of delegated authority by executive branch agencies. The initial version of the APA in 1974 provided a process for public adoption and adjudication of agency rules.⁸² A year later the Legislature first required agencies to provide a statement of estimated economic impact in the notice of initial rulemaking.⁸³ By the early 1990s the Legislature became increasingly concerned about the economic costs of agency rules and amended the APA to compel preparation of economic impact statements under certain circumstances.⁸⁴

The Legislature also determined greater clarity was required to guide and constrain agencies in exercising delegated authority. A comprehensive revision of the APA became law in 1996⁸⁵ expressly limiting rulemaking only to those areas where agencies had both the power to make rules and a substantive statute providing specific guidelines for those rules. To ensure all agency rules conformed with this standard of authority, the Legislature required every agency to review the express legal authority for each rule of the agency and to repeal those which lacked proper authority, over a period of three years.⁸⁶ Further clarification of the rulemaking authority was enacted in 1999 and the process for reviewing the substantive authority for rules was extended into 2001.⁸⁷

(b) Present Reporting Requirement

Once the initial rule reviews conducted after the 1996 amendments were completed the reporting requirement was modified into an ongoing obligation. Under s. 120.74, F.S., agencies now are required to review their rules and perform the following:

- Identify and correct deficiencies;
- Clarify and simplify rules;
- Delete obsolete or unnecessary rules;
- Delete rules that are redundant of statutes;
- Improve efficiency, reduce paperwork, decrease costs to government and the private sector;
- Confer with agencies having concurrent jurisdiction and determine whether their rules can be coordinated; and
- Determine whether rules should be amended or repealed to reduce the impact on small business while meeting the stated objectives of the proposed rule.⁸⁸

By October 1 of each odd-numbered year, each agency must file a report with the Speaker, the President, the Joint Administrative Procedures Committee (JAPC), and each substantive committee of the Legislature, certifying compliance with the statute and providing the following information:

- Changes made to the agency's rules as a result of the review;
- Recommended statutory changes to promote efficiency, reduce paperwork, or decrease costs to government and the private sector;
- The economic impact of the rules on small business;

(c) Development of Economic Review of Rules

With the development of stricter standards for exercising rulemaking authority the Legislature also imposed more comprehensive requirements for agencies to address the economic effect of their rules. By 1992 the Legislature had imposed specific elements for inclusion in economic impact statements, developed criteria for agencies to follow in considering the impact of a rule on small businesses, and required agencies to tier their rules in order to lessen economic impacts on small business.⁹⁰ The 1996 act expanded the criteria both for considering the impact on small business as well as preparing a more comprehensive statement of estimated regulatory costs.⁹¹ Agencies also were required to consider lower cost alternatives to the proposed rule.⁹² Preparation of a statement of estimated regulatory costs (SERC) was mandatory only in response to the filing of a lower cost alternative by a substantially affected party.⁹³

Statutory amendments in 2008 mandated preparation of a SERC if the agency's rule would affect small businesses.⁹⁴ In the same act the Legislature created the Small Business Regulatory Advisory Council⁹⁵ (SBRAC). The primary role of SBRAC is to review existing and proposed agency rules and to advocate for minimizing adverse impacts and economic hardship on small businesses.⁹⁶

The enactment of HB 1565 further increased legislative oversight of agency rulemaking by creating specific economic thresholds for stricter accountability. For all rulemaking initiated on or after November 17, 2010, s. 120.54(3)(b)1. and s. 120.541(1)(b), F.S., require agencies to prepare a SERC if the proposed rule either will have an adverse impact on small businesses or if the rule is likely to directly or indirectly increase regulatory costs in excess of $200,000 in the aggregate in the first year after the rule is implemented. Section 120.541(2)(a), F.S., now requires a complete SERC to include an economic analysis addressing whether the rule is likely to have one of three specific impacts, directly or indirectly, in excess of $1 million in the aggregate within 5 years of going into effect:

- An adverse impact on economic growth, private sector job creation or employment, or private sector employment;
- An adverse impact on business competitiveness, including competition with interstate firms, productivity, or innovation; or
- An increase in regulatory costs, including transactional costs.

The criteria under s. 120.541(2)(a), F.S., creates the threshold for required legislative ratification under s. 120.541(3), F.S. If the economic analysis required for the SERC finds the rule is likely to have one of the foregoing impacts, the rule cannot become effective unless submitted to the Speaker and the President and ratified by the Legislature.

The requirements of HB 1565 apply only to rules which had not become effective as of November 17, 2010, or are proposed for adoption after that date.⁹⁷ Rules which went into effect between July 1, 2008 and November 16, 2010, were subject to greater scrutiny about their potential costs to small businesses and Florida's economy due to the increased criteria for statutory review and the participation of SBRAC. For rules which went into effect before July 1, 2008, agencies only had to prepare a SERC if a party offered a lower cost alternative or the rule impacted small businesses.

Governor Scott's first executive order⁹⁸ created the Office of Fiscal Accountability and Regulatory Reform (OFARR) and mandated each agency under the Governor's authority to conduct a comprehensive review of all that agency's rules. To date the Governor's agencies have identified over 750 rules which may be repealed.⁹⁹ While certain economic factors are included in this review, Executive Order 2011-01 does not compel the same level of analysis required for a SERC under s. 120.54(3)(b) and s. 120.541(2), F.S.¹⁰⁰

(2) Effect of Bill: Review of Existing Rules with Significant Economic Effect

The bill improves legislative oversight of administrative rulemaking with three modifications of the APA:

- The bill adds subsection 120.74(3), requiring agencies annually to prepare a regulatory plan of projected rulemaking, excluding emergency rulemaking, and to report these plans to the Legislature. Subsection 120.74(4) is also added to adjust certain reporting requirements to coordinate with the reports required under new s. 120.745.
- The bill creates s. 120.745, requiring all agencies to conduct a comprehensive review of their rules, identify those rules in effect on or before November 16, 2010 (the day before the ratification requirement went into effect) which have one of the significant economic impacts of over $1 million as stated in s. 120.541(2)(a), F.S., complete modified economic reviews of all such rules over a two year period, and provide annual reports to the Legislature. Agencies must also identify and justify rules requiring data submissions from third parties. This provision will expire on July 1, 2014.
- The bill creates s. 120.7455, establishing the format for a Legislative project to gather information on burdensome administrative rules and providing use immunity and protections from agency retaliation to those parties who participate in the survey. This provision will continue in effect in order to preserve the provided immunity and protections.

(a) Section 120.74(3): Annual Regulatory Plan and Report

Section 120.74, F.S., requires agencies to conduct a biennial review of their rules and report on specific topics to the Speaker, President, and JAPC. Section 5 of EO 2011-01 requires each agency under the authority of the Governor to prepare by July 1 of each year a regulatory plan identifying rulemaking the agency expects to pursue in the next fiscal year. The bill codifies this reporting planning requirement for all agencies and provides for annual reporting to the Speaker, President, and JAPC.

(b) Section 120.74(4): Modification of Biennial Reporting Requirement During Effective Period of s. 120.745

The comprehensive review provided in new s. 120.745 coincides with the biennial reviews and reports required under s. 120.74, F.S. This new subsection (4) avoids duplication of effort on the part of the agencies by integrating elements of the report due in 2011 with the more comprehensive report due under s. 120.745(4) and by suspending the biennial report in 2013 due to the detailed reports due in 2012 and 2013 under s. 120.745(6).

(c) Section 120.745: Comprehensive Rule Review with Emphasis on Economic Effects

⁹⁹ Presentation of Patricia Nelson, Deputy Director of OFARR, at March 23, 2011 meeting of Rulemaking & Regulation Subcommittee.

After the 1996 substantive amendments to the APA, the Legislature adopted a one-time review process for all existing rules. Agencies were given a specific time in which to review their rules for compliance with the substantive law authorizing the rule. Similarly, the bill requires a review of existing rules to ensure conformity with the Legislature's expressed intent to minimize the adverse impacts of agency rulemaking on Florida's economy.

The review and reporting process begins in 2011 and ends in 2013. All agencies will be required to review and categorize their rules and provide a comprehensive report to the Speaker, President, and JAPC by December 1, 2011. For rules in effect on or before November 16, 2010, which the agency wants to retain without amendment, and which have or are projected to have one of the $1 million fiscal impacts delineated in s. 120.541(2)(a), F.S., the agencies are required to divide such rules into two reporting groups: one group to be analyzed and reported by December 1, 2012 (Group 1), and the other by December 1, 2013 (Group 2). For each rule in these Groups the agency shall prepare a compliance economic review incorporating specific information required by the new statute. The bill provides for periods of public comment on the rules to be listed in Group 1 or Group 2 and on the resulting economic reviews, including opportunities to suggest lower cost regulatory alternatives to the existing rule. Comprehensive reports of these economic reviews will be due to the Speaker, President, and JAPC by the above dates. The Legislature thus will receive updated economic evaluations of older rules and may decide what action to take, if any.

The APA definition of "agency" includes most state governmental entities, including constitutionally-created bodies such as the Fish and Wildlife Conservation Commission and regional bodies such as water management districts. Most local governments are exempt but some may be included by special law.¹⁰¹ Section 120.745(1)(a) will exclude local governments with jurisdiction in only one county or less¹⁰² from the comprehensive review process. This recognizes the disparity in resources available to these local governmental units as opposed to entities receiving state funding and which enact rules having a regional or statewide impact.

By definition the bill includes in the required review only those rules required to be published in the Florida Administrative Code.¹⁰³ Rules identified for repeal or amendment will not require the economic reviews created under the bill because either action requires compliance with the current economic analysis procedures in the APA.¹⁰⁴

In addition to the review and identification of rules by December 1, 2011 based on economic effects, agencies must identify those rules defined as having an impact on state revenues. Agencies must also identify and support defined "data collection rules" which they intend to retain. A number of agency rules require non-governmental entities such as service providers or workers compensation insurance carriers to report certain data to the agency. Because of the economic impact on Florida businesses of these various data reporting requirements, the bill requires each agency to report all rules mandating such data reporting. The December 1, 2011 report will include the statutes authorizing the data collection, how the data is used by the agency, and the policies supporting continuation of the program.

The bill requires public notice of completing reports, listing of rules in Group 1 or Group 2, completing compliance economic reviews, and resolving public objections. Proposed s. 120.745(7) provides exclusive publication requirements, relying primarily on electronic postings on the websites of the agencies. Publication required under s. 120.745 will be deemed complete as of the date the required notice, determination or report is published on the agency's website. Agencies must post the full text of documents required under s. 120.745 using links on their respective websites. Once a week each agency will provide the Department of State with copies of all notices published in the previous week on the agency's Internet website for publication in the Florida Administrative Weekly.

¹⁰¹ Section 120.52(1), F.S.

¹⁰² Section 120.52(1)(c), F.S. The statute excludes from the APA officers and governmental entities with jurisdiction over one county or less unless the officer or entity is expressly made subject to the APA by general law, special law, or existing judicial decision. The full definition of "agency" also excludes a number of specific entities, principally municipalities.

¹⁰³ Section 120.55(1), F.S.

¹⁰⁴ Section 120.54(3)(d)5., Fla. Stat.

To avoid unnecessary duplication of effort, the bill exempts from the compliance economic review those rules for which the agency completed the review process implemented under EO 2011-01, but only if the review under EO 2011-01 found the rule did not:

- Adversely affect the availability of business services;
- Adversely affect job creation or retention;
- Place unreasonable restrictions on access to employment; or
- Impose a significant regulatory related cost.

Further, an agency's certification of its biennial review under s. 120.74, F.S., may omit any information included in the reports provided under s. 120.745, the reporting date is extended to December, 2011, and the biennial reporting requirement is excluded for 2013. To further assist agencies in preparing the report required in 2011, the bill provides instructions on a model reporting format. These provisions are intended to streamline the review and reporting process for agencies.

To monitor and enforce compliance with the new statute's review and reporting requirements, proposed s. 120.745(8) requires each agency head to file with JAPC written certifications of compliance with key reporting requirements. Under the bill, agencies which fail to timely file these written certifications will have all rulemaking authority suspended until the certification is properly filed.

The bill provides agencies with an alternative to the detailed review and economic analysis process. No later than October 1, 2011, agencies may choose to cooperate with the review process conducted through OFARR. The agency head must certify this choice to JAPC. The agency's data collection and revenue rules still must be identified by December 1, 2011, but the final report of economic analyses for rules having a significant regulatory cost or economic impact, as identified by OFARR, will not be due until December 1, 2013. This alternative eliminates any duplication of work already undertaken by OFARR under Executive Order 2011-1.

The review proceeds through the 2014 regular session of the Legislature to provide sufficient time for the agencies to conduct the comprehensive review and for public participation, legislative consideration of the reports, and any action the Legislature chooses to take. The bill excludes agency proceedings to repeal rules identified under s. 120.745 from the requirement to prepare a statement of estimated regulatory costs under s. 120.54 and s. 120.541.¹⁰⁵

The bill leaves unchanged the legal status of any rule determined to be invalid. This prevents any agency from using the process of review and submission to the Legislature to override a legal decision invalidating a rule.

Self-Repeal: the bill provides s. 120.745 will stand repealed as of July 1, 2014.

(3) Section 120.7455: Legislative survey of Regulatory Impacts

The bill creates s. 120.7455, providing notice that from the effective date of the act to July 1, 2014, the Legislature may implement an internet-based public survey on the impact of regulatory rules in Florida, including the number and nature of regulations and permitting requirements affecting Floridians. Types of information which may be requested include the name of the business as registered in Florida, the number and identification of the agencies regulating the respondent's lawful activities, the number of permits, licenses, or registrations required for the respondent to engage in a lawful activity, and laws, rules, ordinances, or regulations the respondent alleges to be unreasonably burdensome. To encourage participation and candor in any such survey, the bill provides use immunity from prosecution based on either the act of responding or the information provided. The bill also protects survey respondents from retaliatory acts of an agency based on providing or withholding information in the survey by allowing evidence of retaliatory conduct in mitigation of any proposed sanction, authorizing the presiding judge to award the minimum sanctions authorized by the Legislature.

II. FISCAL ANALYSIS & ECONOMIC IMPACT STATEMENT

A. FISCAL IMPACT ON STATE GOVERNMENT:

1. Revenues:

The impact on revenues in both FY 2011-2012 and FY 2012-2013 is indeterminate, but insignificant. The bill authorizes no new revenue sources and existing revenues would not be increased by these clarifications of administrative procedure and the rule review process.

2. Expenditures:

Requiring disclosure in the rulemaking notice of whether the proposed rule may require ratification will have an indeterminate, but insignificant, impact on agency expenditures. Agencies currently must include in the rulemaking notice a summary of the SERC, if one was prepared,¹⁰⁶ and must prepare a SERC if the proposed rule will adversely affect small business or increase regulatory costs more than $200,000 in the aggregate within 1 year of implementation.¹⁰⁷ As agencies have a duty to address the fiscal impact of a proposed rule, and already incur the expense pertaining to the preparation of a SERC, the information is available to determine whether legislative ratification will be required. The bill thus requires reporting an element the supporting data for which should exist.

Clarifying the rulemaking procedures by including ratification as a separate contingency for the rule to become effective only states current law and imposes no additional tasks or expenditures. Reverting the times for filing for adoption (from 45 to 21 days) or challenging a proposed rule (from 44 to 20 days) after the agency provides a revised SERC conforms these processes to existing law.

Clarifying the exclusion of emergency rulemaking from the SERC and ratification requirements should not impact agency expenditures as SERCs were not previously required. The remaining exemptions created in the bill should be expense neutral.

Costs of review to agencies are indeterminate. By reducing duplication of activities for the agencies which completed reviews under existing OFARR guidelines and integrating the 2011 report with the review already required under s. 120.74, F.S., the costs for the comprehensive review in 2011 should be reduced. The agencies will experience increased costs in completing a compliance economic analysis required for each rule being retained without amendment and which is likely to meet the criteria of s. 120.541(2)(a), F.S. An estimate of any significant compliance review costs should be available for consideration in the 2012 Regular Session and ought to be included in agency budgets for FY-2013 and FY-2014. The cost of reporting will be reduced in 2013 by eliminating the rules review and report under s. 120.74, F.S., for that year. The available alternative of cooperating in an expanded review process with OFARR should further reduce potential costs.

B. FISCAL IMPACT ON LOCAL GOVERNMENTS:

1. Revenues:

Many local governments are not subject to Chapter 120, the Administrative Procedures Act.¹⁰⁸ For local governments subject to rulemaking under Chapter 120, the bill clarifies existing procedural requirements. The impact on revenues in both FY 2011-2012 and FY 2012-2013 is indeterminate but insignificant. The bill authorizes no new revenue sources and existing revenues would not be increased by these clarifications of administrative procedure.

¹⁰⁷ Section 120.54(3)(b)1., F.S.

¹⁰⁸ Section 120.52(1), F.S.

2. Expenditures:

The analysis in section II.A.2 is applicable to those local governments subject to the review, analysis, and reporting requirements under s. 120.745. The impact on expenditures is indeterminate, but insignificant.

C. DIRECT ECONOMIC IMPACT ON PRIVATE SECTOR:

The bill may result in increased litigation costs for non-applicant, third party petitioners who have the burden of ultimate persuasion when challenging a license or permit application. However, private sector applicants who do not have the burden of ultimate persuasion against third party permit challengers are likely to have a corresponding decrease in litigation costs.

D. FISCAL COMMENTS:

No additional fiscal comments.
